See the entire HomeHow story to remove a screen in an awning or push out style window If you need to remove the screen from the window frame, follow these few simple steps: The screen in an awning window is designed to slide down to be able to open your window, and then drag back into place. To remove the screen carefully drag a putty knife to the side of the Track Window rising from the bottom, until you press the spring that holds the window screen in place. You can then pop the bottom of the screen from the window frame. Continue up that same side as the putty knife until you press the upper spring. This will allow you to display the rest of the screen from the window piece. Reinstalling the window screen can be done by going through the above steps in reverse: Place the side without the springs in the FrameUse window the putty knife to squeeze the top of the spring while sliding the top of the window screen back into placeSelect drag the putty knife down the edge of the screen until it presses spring at the bottom , then the window screen will pop right back to placeTools Required: It's no secret that your window screens can get quite the hit no matter the weather. Rain, snow, wind and even excessive heat can easily damage or soil your screens. That's why it's important to know how to remove a window screen when it's time to clean it. Note that removing each window screen is not the same. For each window style, the screen is removed in a specific way. But don't worry. All window screens, regardless of the style of your window, are simple enough to take out and place back in. Read on for step-by-step instructions on how to remove a window screen from Feldco with three of our most popular window styles: the double hung, sliding and casement windows. Double hung window screen removal Double hanging window is the most common window and is most likely the style you have in your home at the moment. Double hung windows have two functional zones that slide up and down to provide ventilation. The reason most homeowners love this particular style of window is because both zones can lean in and are also removable for it Cleaning. Knowing how to operate these zones comes in handy when learning how to remove a window screen from a double hanging window, too. Another thing to keep in mind is that these steps only apply to half the screens that come standard in double hung and sliding windows. If you have a full screen, we'll cover how to remove them later in the article. Stay tuned! Subtraction 1. To remove the screen, you need to raise the bottom sheet of your window completely. Most double hung windows windows have two tabs at the bottom. These tabs should be pushed to the center so the screen can grow as well. Lift the screen about 3 inches so it can be easily removed. 2. Once the screen rises, grab the bottom of it with your hands firmly. Press the right tab back in half, but this time compress the entire screen to the left. After this is done, the screen can be pushed out of the window frame. You'll notice two springs on the side of your screen, these are called spring screen clips and it's what helps the screen pop out with ease. 3. The final step on how to remove a window screen is to turn the screen sideways and bring it in so you can clean it or replace it. Re-introduction of double hanging screen 1. When you want to return the screen back to the position it deserves, make sure the spring screen clips are on the left side and the felt tape at the bottom of your screen is facing you. This is the correct position the screen should be in before returning it. 2. To reposition the window screen, you need to pass the whole thing through your window again. You can't push it back without taking that step. 3. Place the spring screen clips on the left side of your window frame. Pull the right tab back toward the center and compress the screen to the left. Then pull the screen towards you and back into place. Sliding window removal screen sliding windows, also called sliders, are another common window style and are usually found in difficult to reach places such as above the kitchen sink. Sliders are like double hung windows in how they work, but design-wise, they are double hung windows upside down on the side. They also add a modern touch to any room they are in. It is also extremely easy to use sliding window. All you have to do is release a latch and drag it open horizontally. It doesn't get any simpler than that. And guess what? You already know how to remove a window screen from a sliding window. This is because the steps taken are almost identical to removing a double hung screen window. Subtraction 1. The first step is to open one of the zones of your sliding window all the way. Drag the screen to the middle of the window. 2. Again, grab the screen frame but this time press the screen up instead of on the side. The spring screen clips are located at the top of a window screen slider not on the side, like a double hung window screen. 3. Push the screen out and turn to bring it towards you. Re-import your sliding screen 1. To reposition, just as with the hanging window, make sure that the side of the screen with the felt stripe is facing you. Don't forget, the screen springs should face the top rather than the side. 2. Press the screen out of your sliding window, then place the top on the screen piece. Press down to secure the track and drag the screen back into place. Window screen removal casement Another popular window style option is the casement, or crank out, window. Casement windows are articulated on the side and you can using a hand crank. It is extremely easy to operate and provides a lot of ventilation and natural light. Even if it doesn't look like it, learning how to remove a Windows screen from a casement window isn't really hard at all. The casement window screen is designed to be just like the window itself - easy to use! That said, the screen is even easier to remove than double hung and sliding window screens. Subtraction 1. One thing that is important to know when learning how to remove a Windows screen from a casement window is that there are tags located on each side of the screen. These hold the window screen in place and need to be pulled out to release the screen from the frame. 2. Pull out all the tabs at once to pop the screen out, then just remove it from the frame. Re-introduction of casement screen 1. To return the screen, all you have to do is follow the steps above in reverse order. First, place the screen in the box. 2. Then, once the screen is in the frame, press the tabs to secure the screen back into place. That's it, that's it! Easy, right? Full window displays If you've selected full screens in double hung or Feldco slider windows, don't worry – the steps to remove the screen are just as easy to follow. Subtraction 1. The first thing to do is to lean under double hanging belts and completely remove sliding window bands. 2. Once this is done, full screens offered with sliding and double hung windows have very flexible frames. So much so that you can just squeeze them to pull them home. There is a tab that you can pull to make them easier to compress. Re-import the full screen 1. Again, follow the steps above in reverse to return your screen. Press and pop back into the frame. It doesn't get any simpler than that. Now you know everything you need to know about how to remove a window screen from your Feldco window!
